THE GOLDEN RULE

sailing for a peaceful, sustainable future

Welcome The Golden Rule to the Golden Isles!!

IN 1958, FOUR QUAKER PEACE ACTIVISTS sailed the Golden Rule towards the Marshall Islands with the intent to halt nuclear weapons testing. The US Coast Guard boarded her in Honolulu and arrested her crew, inspiring a global outcry.

The peaceful mission raised awareness of the dangers of radiation, prompting worldwide demands to stop nuclear testing. In 1963, the US, USSR and UK signed a Limited Test Ban Treaty banning all atmospheric nuclear testing. The last underground nuclear explosion was in 1992, and in 2021, nuclear weapons were outlawed internationally by the UN Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons.

Currently, the US spends $84,000 per minute on nuclear weapons, more than all other nuclear-armed nations combined. Our great country lavishes billions of our tax dollars on contracts with corporations like Lockheed, Boeing and Northrop Grummen while her citizens cry for housing and sufficient food, quality education, affordable medical care and a healthy environment.

Golden Rule crew members would change history in other ways as well. Jim Peck was a conscientious objector in WWII, member of Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and trade union organizer. Albert Bigelow, captain of the Golden Rule, was Navy lieutenant commander in WWII. Both men participated in the 1961 Freedom Rides, Bigelow being seatmates and assaulted alongside John Lewis in Rock Hill, SC. In 1965, the Voting Rights Act became US law.

The Golden Rule sank in 2010, but in 2015, Veterans for Peace volunteers restored and launched her to her original mission of nuclear disarmament and peace. For the first time, she will visit the Georgia Coast in a 11,000-mile voyage of the “Great Loop.” Come out to meet the Golden Rule crew and take a tour of this historic wooden boat!
